UPDATE

Reader Survey Receives Great Response

The Fraternity and the staff of Shield & Diamond would like to express thanks to all the loyal readers who took the time to respond to the Reader Survey they received with the September 1992 issue.

The purpose of the survey was threefold: to provide a convenient means for readers to update their addresses, to offer readers the opportunity to remove their names from the circulation list (yet still remain on the Fraternity's master mailing list) if they so chose, and to survey the likes and dislikes of our members regarding their magazine.

The total mailing for the September issue of Shield & Diamond was 111,970 copies. Of this number, 6,183 readers (5.5%) returned their surveys. A total of 2,164 provided address updates.

Of 6,183 responses, 1,951 gave us permission to remove their names from the circulation list. Typical comments from this group were "Good cost saving measure . . .", "Glad to help . . .", "We get two at this address . . .", etc.

Overwhelmingly, comments were positive and enthusiastic. More than one member responded "I read it from cover to cover." Other remarks were: "Fine magazine. Keep up the good work," "Excellent publication . . ."

Negative comments typically addressed a specific issue, such as displeasure at not seeing news of the reader's chapter or a dislike for the content of specific features.

The survey of readers' likes and dislikes revealed that Chapter Notes and Alumni Notes were by far the favorite features of the magazine, followed closely by alumnus features. Accordingly, we will make every effort to continue bringing our readers interesting and informative news in these areas.

The Shield & Diamond has an audience of loyal, enthusiastic members. We thank you for your response and encouragement, and we invite you to let us know your thoughts on the Shield & Diamond on a continual basis.

Beta Tau

PiKA Returns to the University of Michigan

Friday, November 13, 1992 proved to be a lucky day for the men of Beta Tau Colony at the University of Michigan. On that day forty-eight colony members were initiated into the brotherhood of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity by host chapters Alpha Rho of Ohio State University and Delta Nu of Wayne State University.

Initiation was one of two significant milestones that weekend. On Saturday, November 14, Beta Tau relinquished its colony status and was rechartered Beta Tau Chapter — the newest chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha.

The weekend's celebration culminated Saturday evening at the chartering banquet at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn, Michigan. In attendance were parents of various brothers of Beta Tau, along with National President Tommy Turner, Great Lakes Regional President Nick Shafor, Annual Fund Director Phil Spessard (who as a chapter consultant helped to recolonize Beta Tau), and Director of Expansion Steve Vincent.

Beta Tau's rechartering was the pinnacle of a year of development on the part of the colony. The rechartering occurred just three weeks after an inspection team composed of members from Alpha Rho Chapter and Delta Nu Chapter, with Expansion Consultant Steve Heck, gave the colony a unanimous vote of approval for rechartering.

Beta Tau History

Beta Tau Chapter was originally chartered in 1922. Fourteen years later the charter was withdrawn. The chapter returned to campus in 1968, only to close in 1974 when the University of Michigan Greek system was in a period of low membership numbers.

Pi Kappa Alpha's latest return to the Michigan campus began in December 1990 with the interest of Jarman Davis, a transfer student from Delta Gamma Chapter at Miami-Ohio. Davis contacted Past Director of Expansion Rick Stonerook about the chances of a chapter on the Michigan campus.

In October 1991, Expansion Associate Chris Davies and Chapter Consultant Phil Spessard began the colonization process. Chris Prescott, a transfer student from Iota Iota Chapter at Michigan State University, assisted on the undergraduate level. Former Golden West Regional President Mike Nelson volunteered his skills as colony advisor.

Once the colony members were

united, a series of retreats were held to establish the goals of the colony. The colony's ultimate goal was to become a chapter in less than a year. The colony elected Jarman Davis as colony president and Chris Prescott as one of two vice presidents.

Now with a plan of action, the colony faced the challenge of lacking a central meeting place for business and social purposes. This challenge was met as the members came together at playing fields for athletics, in the libraries and study rooms for scholarship, and at various local establishments for social activities. The colony also enlisted the aid of the Michigan chapter of Pi Beta Phi sorority to use their house as for a meeting place and for formal rush.

In addition to the internal strengthening of the group, Beta Tau colony wanted to enhance the Michigan campus as well as the surrounding community. The colony shattered its goal for community service hours with over 3,000 hours accumulated in community service activities. The colony made its presence felt at local hospitals during the winter holidays with cookies for children in hospitals and dances and card nights for the elderly. Individual members served the community as coaches and as child care volunteers.

The men of Beta Tau colony returned from summer vacation with the task of recovering from the graduation of several important members and the departure of several members who left to study overseas. Alumni Advisor Mike Fagg, an initiate of Iota Delta at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology and a current graduate student at the University of Michigan, worked with Membership Development Chairman Jason Gamel to prepare for the colony inspection. The unanimous approval of the inspection team indicated the diligence and hard work of the colony members.

History of the University

The University of Michigan was founded in 1817 as the first public university built on property donated by Native American peoples. It moved from Detroit to Ann Arbor in 1837. Michigan had two students enrolled and seven professors on the faculty in its first year of operation in Ann Arbor, and consisted of four faculty homes and one classroom-dormitory building.

Today, the University of Michigan has three separate campuses with 36,000 undergraduates and 12,000 graduate students. Eleven of the twelve graduate programs are ranked in the top ten programs of their fields. □

Chapters push forward as year closes.

In order to have chapter notes published in the Shield & Diamond, chapters must be current with the Fraternity's General Fund and must have paid their insurance assessments.

E EPSILON CHAPTER Virginia Tech

The men of Epsilon Chapter ended the 1991-92 school year in strong fashion. The Pikes were honored with university awards for campus involvement, community service, athletics, and social events. As for individual honors, Jared Hansbrough received the "Greek Man of the Year" award and Kevin Mottley was elected president of the Student Government Association.

In athletics, Epsilon Chapter positioned itself to defend last year's intramural football championship, while the soccer team was also in contention for the championship. Athletic Chairman Dave Popp organized an all-freshman basketball tournament to serve as a campus involvement activity and as an addition to the rush program.

Z ZETA CHAPTER Tennessee-Knoxville

As a means of support for victims of Hurricane Andrew, Pi Kappa Alpha and Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority conducted a fundraising drive prior to UT's football game with Southwestern Louisiana. As a result of the two groups efforts, $27,500 was donated to the American Red Cross to aid hurricane relief efforts. More than 100 fraternity and sorority members took part in the activity.

In other community service activity, Pi Kappa Alpha won the men's division championship of the second annual Kappa Sigma River Raft Race. Proceeds from the race went to the Boys & Girls Clubs of Greater Knoxville.

E XI CHAPTER South Carolina

Fall rush saw Xi Chapter complete its most successful rush in nearly a decade. Xi pledged thirty-three men — the most on the USC campus.

On the playing field, Xi took third in co-rec softball as they competed for the all-around sports championship.

O OMICRON CHAPTER Richmond

Omicron Chapter performed over 1,400 hours of community service in 1991-92. By the end of the first month of this semester the chapter had accumulated 517 hours of community service and was in the running for its eighth consecutive overall intramural championship. Omicron Chapter also made a number of renovations in the chapter house, including new windows and floors.

Σ SIGMA CHAPTER Vanderbilt

Sigma Chapter has established an incentive-based study hall for actives. Brothers with a GPA below the house average can attend monitored study halls. If they raise their GPA above the house average they are rewarded for their efforts.

The men of Sigma Chapter made their presence known in the community as they adopted four youth soccer teams that were organized through the YMCA of Nashville.

On campus, Craig Peckham and Scott Tittle were charter members of Phi Alpha Delta, a pre-law society. Jeremy Barnicle served as news editor of Vanderbilt's student newspaper. Erik Alexander was appointed president of Vanderbilt's Speakers Committee.

Sigma expanded its rush efforts by appointing nine brothers to serve as rush captains. The captains assisted the rush chairmen in planning and coordinating rush activities.

Ω OMEGA CHAPTER Kentucky

Last year Omega Chapter's 129 actives and pledges finished third on campus with a cumulative GPA of 2.8. The chapter had finished eighth in scholastics the previous year.

Rush efforts were successful as Pikes were the only Fraternity on campus to wear coats and ties during rush week. The chapter pledged thirty four men at the end of rush.

Omega won the Greek Athletic Award for the third year in a row.

ΑΘ ALPHA THETA CHAPTER West Virginia

The brothers of Alpha Theta Chapter started off the fall semester with two weeks of rush. The first week was informal and the second week was formal. Sixteen men were pledged by the chapter during the two weeks.

Alpha Theta also conducted its Rent-A-Pike philanthropy in the fall. The event raised over $500 for the National Cancer Society. The next event on the agenda was homecoming week with Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. The week culminated in an alumni reception with approximately 30-50 alumni in attendance.

ΑΙ ALPHA IOTA CHAPTER Millsaps

Chapter President Mike Griffith was elected for membership into Omicron Delta Kappa. Nate McKie was selected for membership into Phi Beta Kappa. Alpha Iota brothers were also represented in twelve other campus honor societies.

In the area of community service, Alpha Iota participated in the phone-a-thon for the Millsaps Annual Fund. The chapter also participated in the Adopt-A-Highway program and Mid-Town project, a program that helped rebuild urban areas in the city of Jackson.

Alpha Iota led the Millsaps Greek system in student body elections. The chapter had more campus senators than any other fraternity on campus, including campus-wide, off-campus, and fraternity row districts. Alpha Iota also had the most Perspective Leaders involved in the freshman orientation program.

Football free safety Chuck Edwards led his position in tackles and was contending for all-conference honors.

ΑΚ ALPHA KAPPA CHAPTER Missouri-Rolla

The year started off in winning form for Alpha Kappa with its seventh consecutive first place finish in homecoming. The Pikes winning yard display was the largest in UMR's history.

The intense rush efforts of the chapter resulted in the second largest pledge class on campus.

Alpha Kappa was the leader in intramurals with first place finishes in flag football and tennis.

organizations, including Mike Moran, president of the Association of Mechanical Engineers, and Mike Guidry, vice president of the Association of Mechanical Engineers.

Chapter Advisor Bob Wolf was installed as the president of the University of Missouri-Rolla Alumni Association.

AA ALPHA LAMBDA CHAPTER Georgetown

Alpha Lambda finished the spring semester by winning two regional awards. The awards were "Most Campus Involvement" and "Highest Overall Grade Point Average."

The Pikes at Georgetown became a recognizable force in campus activities and academics. Eight members of Alpha Lambda received a total of thirteen awards at the Academic Honors Day awards ceremony, the largest number received by any Greek organization. Pikes also received six awards for campus life involvement. Doug Moncrief was elected president of the Student Government Association and Brad Denham was elected vice president of the Phi Beta Lambda honorary business fraternity. Matt Collinsworth was appointed editor-in-chief of the Georgetown literary magazine, Inscape.

Pikes were also busy with community service programs. Charles Cook, Brian Flanders, Andrew Chancellor, Kelly Carlton and Brad Denham spent Saturday mornings and Tuesday and Thursday afternoons building houses for Habitat for Humanity. Steve Gullette, Chancellor and Charlton donated their time to Georgetown College's Environmental Action Group. Alpha Lambda sponsored its third annual Spike with Pikes volleyball tournament. Proceeds from the event went to D.A.R.E. (Drug Awareness Reaction Education).

AP ALPHA RHO CHAPTER Ohio State

The men of Alpha Rho Chapter finished the 1991-92 school year with an active membership of over fifty men. This was the largest number of men in the chapter in almost ten years.

On campus, the Pikes participated in the all Greek philanthropy Sub Fest. Robert Douthit was initiated into the Order of Omega and Mortar Board societies. He is the second member of Alpha Rho in two years to receive these honors. Pikes also took third overall in Greek Week.

AΩ ALPHA OMEGA CHAPTER Kansas State

Alpha Omega made great strides in the area of scholastic achievement. In addition to having over 30 members post a 3.0 GPA or higher. The spring pledges boasted the third highest GPA for a class on campus.

Once again the chapter was recognized at the National Convention for its community service efforts with an honorable mention award. Over the course of the year, the chapter donated a total of $2,855 and 6,073 hours of service to the community.

The Pikes of Alpha Omega played a significant role on the K-State campus. Jim Hart was elected president of the IFC and Joe Claves and Doug Neuschafer were selected to serve on the student senate. In athletics, Alpha Omega was a force in intramural wrestling as three team members won their weight divisions, enroute to a team championship.

BH BETA THETA CHAPTER Cornell

As it enters its seventy-sixth year on the Cornell Campus, Beta Theta's chapter house is still standing tall. $50,000 in renovations were spent on bathroom and room repairs. Unfortunately, the "Nest" was closed and is now used only for storage purposes.

BK BETA KAPPA CHAPTER Emory

Beta Kappa's preparations for the fall began in August at the National Convention as four members were in Phoenix to gather ideas for the upcoming year. Once the school year was underway, the chapter placed an emphasis on upperclassmen rush and pledged six men.

The next major event for the chapter was alumni weekend September 19-21. A large number of alumni turned out for the event and built momentum for the next alumni gathering which will be held in New York in January. The chapter also raised $1,500 in an alumni telethon.

The David Chalkin scholarship is at $6,000 and continues to gain financial support. The third annual Pikefest fundraiser for leukemia was held November 20th. Last year's Pikefest raised $8,000 in the name of Rich Davis.

BO BETA OMICRON CHAPTER Oklahoma

Several brothers were active during the fall political season. Rick Nagel and Jay Potter were officers of College Republicans. They assisted with the presidential and vice presidential visits to Oklahoma. Nagle drove on the vice presidential motorcade and Potter handled press credentials during Vice President Dan Quayle's visit to Oklahoma City. During the campaign they both coordinated volunteer efforts and other campaign activities.

Mathew Cottrell participated in the Democratic bus tours throughout Oklahoma. Cottrell also worked for the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate. Cottrell was responsible for arranging speakers and organizing volunteers.

The men of Beta Omicron participated in Delta Gamma sorority's Anchor Splash philanthropy for aiding the blind.

Steve Ozmer was the winner of the all-fraternity Mr. Anchor Splash contest. In the swimming competition, Beta Omicron finished third.

ΓE GAMMA XI CHAPTER Washington State

Thanks to the support of generous alumni, Gamma Xi continued its renovation of the chapter house by investing $20,000 this past summer.

Among the renovations were a security system, a new kitchen and dining room, and a new paint job for the entire house.

The men of Gamma Xi conducted another successful formal rush. Under the supervision of Rush Chairman Greg Pentland, the chapter pledged twenty-six men during rush.

The Washington State Pikes began the fall semester by winning championships in both golf and volleyball. Gamma Xi was also well-represented on the Cougar football team. Vince Saldivar, defensive end; Ronny Childs, linebacker; Mike Bailey, offensive tackle; and Shane Delacruz, wide receiver were all in the starting line-up for the Cougars.

Gamma Xi bid farewell to their mascot of eleven years this last August. "Bo," a Newfoundland dog was a friend to all brothers who crossed his path.

ΓΦ GAMMA PHI CHAPTER Wake Forest

Many members of Gamma Phi volunteered their time in the community. Some of the events were Hoop-it-Up, a three-on-three basketball tournament to benefit Brenner's Children's Hospital, Meals on Wheels, and the Samaritan Ministries Homeless Shelter.

ΔΒ DELTA BETA CHAPTER Bowling Green State

On Saturday, October 10th, Delta Beta Chapter held homecoming festivities as the chapter celebrated its fiftieth year on the BGSU campus. Delta Beta was the first national fraternity at BGSU.

In community service activities, chapter members, former chapter advisor Walt Becker, and current chapter advisor Richard Powers assisted a chicken barbecue sponsored by the Bobcat's Booster Club at Bowling Green High School. The event raised $2,600 for the high school's athletic program.

ΔΓ DELTA GAMMA CHAPTER Miami-Ohio

Delta Gamma's annual Oxford Kid's Day, planned in connection with the Oxford Welfare Service, took place on October 25th. Approximately 50 kids enjoyed food and games at the chapter house.

On campus, Phil Odella served as chairman of Greek Week. Janszen Schneider and Brian Weinberg were Greek Life guides. Kevin Haas, John Buckingham, and Brian Williams worked on the campus activities council for homecoming.

In athletics, the Greek Week basketball team made it to the championship game. The Pike obstacle course was once again one of the most highly attended events, and Delta Gamma's soccer team advanced to the playoffs with only one loss.

Competition also took place in the classroom. Scholarship Chairman Jeff Omslaer established a program that awards prizes to teams and pairs of brothers who achieve the highest GPA.

Donations are still needed for the Donna Churchman fund, which honors her twenty-three years of service to the chapter.

ΔΙ DELTA IOTA CHAPTER Marshall

At the 1992 National Convention, the men of Delta Iota Chapter were awarded the Community Service Award for the sixth consecutive year, and also the Intramural Award. The chapter moved into the fall at a fast pace. Twenty-four pledges were signed during rush. Delta Iota also entered the school year with the highest GPA among Greeks.

ΔΝ DELTA NU CHAPTER Wayne State

Scholastic Chairman Pat Smyke set up new study days for all chapter members in case they are having problems with their school work. Every Tuesday and Thursday members are welcome to gather for several hours of quiet study time.

Community Service Chairman Michael Roberts set up a bagel sale that made a forty-seven dollar profit. The chapter was also involved in a blood drive with the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. A pumpkin drive was held in October.

The men of Delta Nu have made correspondence with alumni and parents a priority. Alumni Relations Chairman Joe Henderson, with the assistance of Craig Sawyers, completed the chapter newsletter. Public Relations Chairman Jay Pate sent a parents' newsletter to all chapter parents.

Rush Chairman Mark Dzialeczak and his committee did an outstanding job with fall rush. Twenty-two pledges were signed and concentrated on their pledge period with Paul Buffa leading the way as pledge master.

ΔΞ DELTA XI CHAPTER Indiana

Senior Todd Morris was this year's president of Indiana University's Annual Dance Marathon. This weekend event raised money for the Ryan White Foundation in Indianapolis. Seniors Brian Major and Adam Carter also served on the Dance Marathon executive committee.

The Pikes signed nineteen new members. Initiation took place October 8th.

Delta Xi proved to be a force on the football field as Pike football teams accumulated a record of 7 wins, 0 losses, and 1 tie. This nearly flawless record earned two teams top seeds in the championship tournament. The softball team advanced to the semi-finals and was edged out in the third place game.

ΔΟ DELTA OMICRON CHAPTER Drake

Delta Omicron began the year with a tremendous increase in pledgings. Twenty-one men pledged Delta Omicron, more than twice the number of men from the previous year.

The chapter GPA has surpassed the all men's average for two straight semesters. The Pikes did not lose any sport during the spring semester, which allowed them to overcome a 500 point deficit to win the Voltmer Trophy.

On campus, J.J. Irke, a senior actuarial science major, served as president of IFC. Jeffrey Glasheen, winner of the 1992 Powers Award, established an alumni educational foundation for the chapter.

To increase community service efforts, members were required to complete a set number of community service hours.

ΔΧ DELTA CHI CHAPTER Nebraska-Omaha

A number of members of Delta Chi Chapter were individually honored for their leadership accomplishments. Jerry O'Doherty won Outstanding Greek Member for Academic Achievement. Wade Louis was elected Homecoming King for 1992-93. Doug Cranfield was elected regional treasurer for 1992-93 Great Plains Conference. Brent Litjen was elected vice president for IFC. Matt Arnold was honored as the most enthusiastic student senator and for proposing the most resolutions.

Epsilon Upsilon Chapter added a deck to the house at Gannon University.

Delta Chi rushed and pledged 30 men this semester. The chapter held rush events and used mass mailings and direct marketing techniques.

Pikes were a presence on UNO's baseball team. Keith Maly was a pitcher, Mike Simcho played third base, and Chris Redmond played outfield and first base. Delta Chi has won the Sports Cup for the last four years.

EK EPSILON KAPPA CHAPTER Lamar

It was a busy summer and fall for the brothers of Epsilon Kappa. The Pikes acquired a new house adjacent to campus and are currently under a one-year lease with the option to buy.

On campus, SMC Shawn Lowe was the student director for the Leadership Lamar Conference. The conference was an off-campus, three day training conference for the top 100 student leaders at Lamar. Brother Tim McMurray served as the student director for the university's orientation program.

Stephen Hockett, Shawn Lowe, Tim McMurray, and Martin Roberts were initiated into Order of Omega. PiKA had more men in this organization than any other fraternity on campus.

On the weekend of October 16-18, Epsilon Kappa served as the host for the Lone Star Regional Leadership Conference.

The chapter was also successful in community service this semester, including working a barbecue benefit for the local Marines and a bazaar for the Beaumont Civic Ballet, and serving as hosts during alumnus Nick Lampson's annual Columbus Day Dinner. Lampson is the tax assessor-collector for Jefferson County.

Paul Clayton was named Epsilon Kappa's new chapter advisor, and Lamar's Head Baseball Coach Jim Gilligan was appointed the chapter's new faculty advisor.

EL EPSILON LAMBDA CHAPTER Murray State

Community service was a priority for the men of Epsilon Lambda during the fall semester. They participated in the highway cleanup program which logged 60 man-hours; a Tootsie Roll Drive which also produced 60 hours; planting trees for the Humane Society which netted another 40 hours; and the Haunted Forest that recorded 1,500 man hours for the chapter.

Athletics were another area of importance for Epsilon Lambda. The volleyball team won the annual Tri-Sigma Volleyball Competition. The softball team came in second in the Annual Alpha Sigma Alpha Softball Tournament.

The Pikes also served as campus leaders. Brian Van Horn was vice president of the Student Government Association. Chris Lane was an SGA senator.

Epsilon Lambda's rush program, which has won several regional awards, once again proved successful. The chapter's pledge class of fifteen men was the largest on campus.

EN EPSILON NU CHAPTER Georgia State

Epsilon Nu's fall 1992 pledge class worked at a local haunted house to benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Association. Brothers A.B. Childrey and Garrett Hoffman participated in the Whitewater Amusement Park Duck Race to benefit the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) Foundation. Hoffman participated in a number of races in the Atlanta area to benefit various causes. The chapter also roadblocked and received over $500 to help the Georgia Council on Child Abuse.

Epsilon Nu had its first official rush retreat with over forty-five brothers attending. Rush Chairman Mike Dailey was successful in raising funds to ensure a quality rush program. Epsilon Nu pledged fifteen men in what was considered a weak year for rush at Georgia State University.

The Pikes completed an undefeated football season and travelled to Georgia Southern for the regional playoffs. Most valuable players included Jeff Rodemeyer and Tommy Williams. James Keating was successful in winning the singles tennis championship. On October 24, Garrett Hoffman ran in the 1992 Washington Marathon. He placed 5,004 out of 15,000 runners.

ES EPSILON SIGMA CHAPTER Tennessee-Martin

Epsilon Sigma raised its overall GPA from 2.06 to 2.43.

The Pikes of Epsilon Sigma were involved in many community service activities in the surrounding community and on campus. They were involved in the Adopt-A-Highway program, held "Pike Fights," which raised $1,900 for the Infant Stimulation Program, and also raised $700 through their annual chili supper. The proceeds of the chili supper were donated to a brother's family member who was seriously injured in a car accident. Epsilon Sigma also contributed 413 man hours to a local PBS station and donated a bicycle as a prize to the St. Jude's Bike-A-Thon. The chapter was also responsible for raising $1,000 for the UTM pom pon squad to travel to a national competition.

In campus activities, the chapter contributed 30 man-hours to the UTM Blood drive. Epsilon Sigma won an IFC competition to benefit the Leukemia Foundation and participated in a walk-a-thon to benefit breast cancer research. The men of Epsilon Sigma also served as volunteers for the Special Olympics.

In athletics, the Pikes finished second in golf, softball, and in an intramural football tournament. The chapter won the annual Homecoming Rope-Pull for the second consecutive year.

EY EPSILON UPSILON CHAPTER Gannon

Epsilon Upsilon initiated twenty-one members last year, the chapter's largest pledge class in history. The members also worked with other Gannon Greeks to raise over $2,000 for the Cascade Playground Project, benefiting inner-city youth.

Epsilon Upsilon is proud of its new deck, built as an addition to the house.

ZT ZETA GAMMA CHAPTER Eastern Illinois

This fall two successful changes were made to strengthen the bonds of brotherhood for Zeta Gamma Pikes. A good response was seen from the newly revised alumni newsletter, The Link, and the pledge pen pal program was reinstated, in which pledges correspond with alumni from their hometowns. A highlight for the men of Zeta Gamma was fall rush. The chapter opened its doors to thirty-eight new members. This was the highest number on campus, as well as a chapter record.

On the playing field, the chapter took first place in track, softball, whiffleball, wrestling, volleyball, and trapshooting.

ZE ZETA EPSILON CHAPTER Western Kentucky

not met. The chapter also developed an academic advisory program. Brothers majoring in various subjects will help pledges who need tutoring in their particular areas of specialization.

John Kuntz headed up the community service office and had the Pikes heavily involved in Bowling Green's community. Forty members of Zeta Epsilon volunteered at Bowling Green's Great American Air Affair. The chapter also volunteered time to work for Western Kentucky's Alumni Phone-A-Thon and blood drives for the American Red Cross.

On campus, Zeta Epsilon members held a number of campus positions. Toby Durham was president of IFC and two Pikes were on the executive council of IFC. Chris Walsh was a top member of the University's Speech team. Jaron Blandford and Todd Brann were involved in the honors program and University Scholars Program and were members of Phi Eta Sigma honor society.

The chapter pledged thirty-four men during rush. This was the largest pledge class on campus.

In athletics, Greg Parker and Greg Tibbs were cheerleaders for the university. Mike Curran, Mark Segwick, and Matt Raymond were members of the tennis team. Terry White and Larry Lock were on the track team. In chapter athletics, the pledge class teamed up with Alpha Xi Delta sorority and won the Pledge Olympics. The Pikes also took first in the slamfest volleyball, basketball, and dunking tournaments.

ZΠ ZETA PI CHAPTER South Florida

Zeta Pi's flag football team, led by Team Captain John Kreiger, claimed the Pre-Season All Campus Tournament Championship and cruised to first place in the Greek division with an undefeated season. Additional first place finishes for the chapter were golf (both team and individual) and racquetball.

Mitch Crandall was attorney general of the student government, Richard Lorenzo was on IFC's judicial board, Matt Collins, was editor of The Oracle, the student newspaper, and Ted Eilbeck, a member of the USF golf team, was named pre-season All-American.

Pikes have also been active in philanthropies. The Pikes and two other fraternities participated in "Greekpeace", a project promoting unity among the major fraternities on campus. The chapter also worked approximately 100 man-hours in cleaning up environmentally sensitive areas of Tampa Bay. Zeta Pi members also donated their time to the Hillsborough County Listener Program. Volunteers listened to troubled teens and helped them build their self-esteem.

ZP ZETA RHO CHAPTER North Dakota

Zeta Rho Chapter received the regional scholarship award at the Great Plains Regional Conference after achieving an overall 2.91 GPA. The implementation of a big brother study program was a major factor in the chapter's scholastic success.

The chapter continued its community service program by participating in Big Brothers of America. The members took their "little brothers" to a football game and carved pumpkins for Halloween. The Pikes also contributed time to the United Way, United hospital, and the local Parkwood Place retirement home.

Zeta Rho had a successful rush program which included the chapter's fifth annual lawn dance, bowling with Gamma Phi Beta sorority, and a movie night with Alpha Phi sorority.

ZΦ ZETA PHI CHAPTER Missouri-St. Louis

The men of Zeta Phi helped the St. Louis homeless by gathering 1,600 items during an area food and clothing drive. The chapter also served the community by cleaning the highway in front of the chapter house. The Pikes accumulated 175 man-hours in community service by answering phones for the MDA telethon.

On campus, Mike Tomlinson was president of the student government. Derek Galyon, Paul Lewis, Pat Ebers, and Bill Robison were also involved with SGA. Jayson Hardie and Robb Williams served as student senators.

HB ETA BETA CHAPTER Seton Hall

On October 10, Eta Beta Chapter celebrated its second annual pig roast, entertaining approximately 500 alumni and guest. The brothers at Seton Hall would like to thank all the alumni and brothers from around the region who helped make this event a tremendous success.

HZ ETA ZETA CHAPTER Middle Tennessee State

Eta Zeta was a leader in community service on the MTSU campus. The chapter sponsored a little league softball team, blood drives with the American Red Cross and the Adopt-A-Highway program.

The chapter also participated in a week long seminar on sexual assault awareness held on the MTSU campus. This was an educational experience for the brothers as they learned more about this area of risk management.

Through the support of alumni and the participation of the chapter, much needed work was done on the chapter house. Brothers David Gonzales and Rick Goodrich played key roles in coordinating the project.

HN ETA NU CHAPTER Northern Illinois

The brothers of Eta Nu opened 1-800-number phone lines on November 6 for the MDA telethon. Eta Nu raised over $1,000 for Hope Haven to provide food and shelter for homeless individuals and families through its partnership with Dot's Place, a DeKalb restaurant. Finally, the chapter organized and hosted the third annual Women's Tug-of-War on September 26. Proceeds went to the Ben Gordon Sexual Assault Center.

HO ETA OMICRON CHAPTER Northeast Louisiana

After winning the coveted Smythe Award at the 1992 National Convention, the men of Eta Omicron were poised to make another run for this prestigious award.

Eta Omicron accumulated over 1,200 hours of community service just in the first half of the fall semester. The March of Dimes, Jail and Bail, The Ronald McDonald House, Mini Grand Prix, and a basketball game with the local juvenile detention center were just a few of the chapters community service events. The main focus of the fall semester's community service program was Pike Jam '92. This event featured seven bands who performed in an area park to benefit a local AIDS awareness and help group. This event attracted over 400 people and raised nearly $750.

The chapter was in position to win its third consecutive intramural championship, and on campus, Charlie Jaubert was president of the NLU IFC.

HΣ ETA SIGMA CHAPTER West Georgia

Eta Sigma's representatives at the 1992 National Convention left with the Harvey T. Newell Award and a rush award. The Newell award goes to the most improved chapter in the country.

On the West Georgia campus, Stanley Dodson received the Academic Achievement Award from the West Georgia College Braves Detachment. Dodson also received the ROTC Physical Training Award. Dodson's perfect score of 300 points entitled him to win the U.S. Army Physical Fitness

Zeta Phi Chapter at the University of Missouri-St. Louis participated in a telethon benefiting the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Badge. Dodson also won Basic Cadet of the Quarter, ROTC Ranger Challenge Certificate and the Color Guard Ribbon.

ΗΦ ETA PHI CHAPTER Central Florida

PiKA and leadership were synonymous at UCF. The Pikes held six of the fifteen IFC positions. Brother Britt Massing was IFC president. Student Body President Jason DiBona was elected to an unprecedented second term and was also Greek Man of the Year. Joe Eagan, Doug Schoen and Penn Holsapple held seats on the UCF President's Leadership Council.

UCF Pikes had access to the latest in risk management innovations. The chapter owned two beepers, to be carried by sober, responsible brothers willing to assist chapter members who might need a ride.

Thanks to pledging sixty men last year, Eta Phi was proud to take PiKA's Sunshine Region Rush Award. This fall's pledge class of thirty-seven men promised to keep Eta Phi on the top in rush.

Eta Phi continued to be a force in varsity and intramural athletics. Several brothers occupied positions on UCF's varsity football, baseball, tennis, and ski teams. In intramurals, Pikes had an undefeated softball season, won the Greek 5K run, won doubles tennis, took second in flag football and had four TKOs in four fights during Greek Gloves, making Eta Phi tournament champs.

The Pike house attracted a lot of attention last year when Brother Horace Grant of the Chicago Bulls dropped by the house to visit with members and donate an autographed jersey and a pair of shoes to Eta Phi's chapter archives.

ΘΒ THETA BETA CHAPTER Montevallo

Theta Beta began the fall semester by pledging eighteen men through formal rush, resulting in the largest pledge class on campus.

The president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, rush chairman and entertainment director of IFC were all Pikes. In community service, four brothers worked with the fire department and the Adopt-A-Mile program.

ΘΔ THETA DELTA CHAPTER Francis Marion

Theta Delta began the school year on a strong note as it was recognized for having the highest fraternity GPA from the previous spring.

The chapter had a great time with the brothers of Mu Chapter at Presbyterian College. The chapters mixed with both the Kappa Delta sorority of Francis Marion and the Alpha Delta Pi sorority of Presbyterian.

ΘΖ THETA ZETA CHAPTER Northern Iowa

Scholastically, Theta Zeta Chapter had an overall GPA of 2.73. Fifteen men had over a 3.0 GPA and five men were on the Dean's List. Theta Zeta was awarded the Chapter Leadership and Educational Programming Award at Greek Week 1992. In athletics, the chapter was 10th out of 170 male intramural teams on campus, an improvement from 130th the previous year.

ΘΛ THETA LAMBDA CHAPTER Creighton

The brothers of Theta Lambda were surprised upon moving into a newly renovated house for the 1992-93 school year. The renovations were the result of a fire in the basement of the house during the summer. Through the housing corporation, over $110,000 was spent on the renovations.

Theta Lambda was very well represented on the Creighton Campus. Chris Allen was IFC vice president and Mike Bodefeld served as IFC rush chairman during the spring semester. Scott Wede was treasurer of the Congress of Business Administration of Creighton University. Jason Hilliard served as a representative to the Student Board of Governors. Jason Doescher served as the student advisor to the Freshman Leadership Program. John Alagaban and Dean Brown were inducted into the Order of Omega.

ΘΟ THETA OMICRON CHAPTER Indiana State

Theta Omicron continued its excellent alumni relations program by having an alumni golf tournament during the fall semester, as well as an alumni newsletter, and an alumni phone-a-thon. The phone-a-thon gave the chapter the opportunity to double check addresses, phone numbers and social security numbers.

In community service, the chapter has accumulated almost 600 hours of community service.

Seven members of Theta Omicron participated in varsity athletics. Last spring the chapter won the Greek intramural competition for the tenth consecutive year.

A New Perspective

An Interview With Pi Kappa Alpha's National President

by Timothy J. McNary

On August 4, 1992, at Pi Kappa Alpha's National Convention, Thomas J. Turner (Texas Tech, Epsilon Gamma '67) was installed as the Fraternity's twenty-eighth national president. The role of national president is just the latest in a long line of volunteer positions that Turner has held for the benefit of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Turner served as Epsilon Gamma's chapter advisor from 1974-78. He continued his volunteer efforts as president of the Lone Star Region from 1978-80, and served as legal counsel to the Supreme Council from 1980-84.

Turner was elected a Supreme Council vice president in 1984 and served in that capacity until 1988. He then served the Pi Kappa Alpha Educational Foundation as a trustee from 1988-92.

Professionally, Turner practices law as a partner with Turner, Medina & O'Neal, P.C. in Lubbock, Texas. He is a member of the State Bar of Texas, the American Bar Association, American Trial Lawyers Association and the State Bar of Texas Committee on Lawyer Advertising. He is a director of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association. Turner and his wife Lou Pat have two children, Lisa, 18, and T.J., 14.

The Great Plains Regional Leadership Conference in September was Turner's first appearance at a regional conference as national president. During the conference, the Shield & Diamond asked Turner his thoughts on his involvement with the Fraternity as well as on the current state of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Q. If you could accomplish just one task over the next two years as Pi Kappa Alpha's national president, what would it be?

A. It would be to make everyone recognize how important it is to make a commitment to the Fraternity which extends beyond the four years of college and the undergraduate experience.

Q. In addition to this task, what do you see as the major objectives for you and the Supreme Council over the next two years?

A. I think we will continue to face the issues that have been addressed by previous

Thomas J. Turner
(Texas Tech, Epsilon Gamma '67)

Councils in terms of risk management, particularly in the area of alcohol awareness, and to continue working towards the goals that the previous Council had set.

Q. Will the Council develop further goals or concentrate solely on the current goals?

A. We will continue to work on the established goals, but two of my goals are membership development and membership recruitment. I think we have the opportunity to address these issues now, whereas in the past we were dealing with issues that were critical in terms of risk management. Risk management seems to be reaching people. Now, if we can be successful in the membership development and membership recruitment, I'll think we've done a fantastic job.

Q. As far as membership recruitment and the RUSH 2000 program, what do you think we can do to make people aware that growth is vital to the Fraternity?

A. We've emphasized chapter programming a great deal at our leadership conferences and at the Chapter Presidents Conference. In my opinion, we haven't addressed membership recruitment to the same degree. The RUSH 2000 program is a very good concept and the people who worked on that need to be congratulated for coming up with the program.

Q. What do you believe is the Fraternity's greatest strength right now?

A. I think our greatest strength is the depth of our alumni leadership. I truly think that we have, from the Supreme Council down to the chapter advisors, a depth of leadership that I doubt any other fraternities in the country can match.

Q. What do you think will be the Fraternity's greatest challenge heading into the next decade?

A. Probably in the next decade the most important issue we are going to face in order to remain on campuses is selling the university administrations on the idea that we do have a function and we can make a contribution to the undergraduate experience.

Q. At conferences such as this one (Great Plains), are you going to have a similar message that you'll convey at each one? Will you have a certain theme surrounding your message as national president?

A. I started my message at the National Convention, and really, the message I have is nothing more than a continuation of the thinking of the past six national presidents. It's the underlying theme of all the risk management presentations that have been done, and that message is, "you know how to behave and how to do what you know is right."

Q. Are we moving along fast enough sending the message on proper risk management?

A. In most areas of the country, yes. There are still some pockets of resistance.

Q. How do you get to those "pockets of resistance," places where tradition, or so-called tradition, dies hard?

A. Sometimes when the tradition dies hard, the carrier dies with it, unfortunately. I think what we need to do is recognize where tradition is a barrier and try to redirect those energies. Because if we don't, the tradition really will kill the carrier. We've seen this happen before in the Fraternity.

Q. Looking back on your days as an undergraduate, how did you get involved with Pi Kappa Alpha?

A. By accident.

Q. By accident?

A. I was dragged kicking and screaming into the Fraternity. That is no joke. When I pledged, I didn't realize it and none of my pledge brothers did either, but the chapter at Texas Tech only had twenty-one members. Their rush technique was to have parties in a very dark place with a very loud band. We didn't realize it, but most of the people at the parties were the rushees. They used what I still think is one of the most successful rush techniques, and that is one-on-one rush.

There were two guys, Larry Wynn and Bill Garrard, who wouldn't leave me alone. They got my class schedule from some place and one of them would walk with me from one class to another. They would call me to make sure I was coming to a party and if I expressed any reluctance to go, one of them would come by and get me. I double-dated with one or the other of them on Friday and Saturday for two and a half weeks. I really didn't want to join a fraternity because I didn't think I had the money. Neither of my parents had been in a sorority or fraternity and I didn't really know what a fraternity was all about. Finally I said, if you'll just leave me alone, I'll join.

Q. Did you pledge your first semester of college?

A. We had deferred rush so we pledged in the second semester. Twenty-one guys pledged forty-four guys. Even though I pledged reluctantly, the Fraternity has been the greatest experience in my life. The Fraternity has become my avocation.

Q. You have held a number of leadership positions as an alumnus of the Fraternity. Did you anticipate this type of involvement when you graduated from Texas Tech?

A. No. It never really occurred to me that I would do anything beyond being a chapter advisor. I thought that being a national officer was something beyond my reach. I didn't know how one became a national officer or anything like that.

Q. How was the night of the final banquet in Phoenix when you entered the banquet room as the new national president? What was running through your mind at that time?

A. I don't think I've ever had more fun. I was trying to think of things to compare it to — I've had some great milestones in my life such as when I was married, or when I graduated everything he does. With all the different boards we have, it's difficult to see the whole picture, and Ray does. Ray has the unique ability to pull everyone together for a consensus for the good of the Fraternity — he's done it time after time after time. He truly loves the Fraternity, loves what he does, and it's more than just a job.

Q. Earlier we talked about the strengths of the Fraternity. Are there any weaknesses in the Fraternity that we haven't touched on?

A. We have a weakness that has been around a long time. We talked about it in the first question. We have a serious problem in losing members after they graduate. If we have a short from law school and ten days later my daughter was born, and then when my son was born. Those are things that are unique things in my life and are exciting in their own way, but when I was standing there, waiting to walk down in the spotlight at the National Convention, I felt, "...this is one of the milestones in my life." Anybody who knows me knows that I wanted to do this, but they also know this is something I didn't have an agenda for. I truly feel that this is an office that seeks an individual at a particular time.

Q. Has there been a person or individuals who have influenced you as you have run your course within the Fraternity?

A. Ray Orians.

Q. What has Ray done to influence you?

A. Ray has shown a dedication to the Fraternity that I think a lot of people don't give him credit for because they don't know coming it is a failure to recognize how important it is to maintain contact with people after graduation. We need to instill in them that Fraternity membership extends beyond college.

Q. Since you've been an initiate of Pi Kappa Alpha, what has been the one constant element of the Fraternity?

A. I thought it was something that was unique to our chapter at Texas Tech, but I've noticed it at chapters all over the country and at the national level — and that is friendship.

Some of the best friends I have, I've made through the Fraternity. And the best friend I have ever had was my roommate, who was also my pledge brother. He was killed in 1979 while I was attending a regional presidents conference in Memphis. When you think of best friends, most people are fortunate to have one in a lifetime. I've had two. The first was my roommate, and the second is a fellow named Rob Bertoia. He's a Pike from the University of Texas.

There's a true atmosphere of friendship I find all over the country within the Fraternity.

Theta Omicron worked towards once again achieving an excellent scholarship program. Last year Theta Omicron had the highest fraternity GPA for the 24th out of the last twenty-seven semesters.

ΘΥ THETA UPSILON CHAPTER

Tennessee Tech

The annual Pikes Peak was held for the Cookeville Animal Shelter and raised $2,200 for the organization. Theta Upsilon accumulated over 150 hours of community service during the summer.

On campus, the men of Theta Upsilon participated in the Alpha Delta Pi sorority "Diamond Dive," the Tau Kappa Epsilon "Teke Week," and the Phi Mu sorority "Greek god" competition.

Over half of the chapter's committees were led by new brothers. A number of chapter events were led by former members of the Alpha Eta pledge class.

A variety of housing renovations were completed in recent months. A new fence was built in the back of the house, and double doors were built at the entrance of the house's deck. The doors were contributed by alumni and some parents of chapter members.

Fall rush brought twenty six new pledges into the chapter. In athletics, Theta Upsilon finished fifth in tennis, fourth in golf, and were undefeated in football with two games left in the season.

ΘΦ THETA PHI CHAPTER

Wichita State

Theta Phi was involved with the Adopt-A-Highway program as part of its community service efforts. The chapter also had a trick-or-treat charity drive with the Gamma Beta Phi sorority to benefit the Big Brothers and Big Sisters program.

The chapter elected five new officers during the fall semester. Rod Larson was president. Doug Houchins was internal vice president and Clark Drowatski was external vice president. Drowatski was also a semi-finalist for the Greek Man of the Year competition. He also worked with Kevin Barron to lead the rush program and signed nine new pledges in the fall. Jeff Haught was treasurer and Brian Hershberger was secretary.

The men of Theta Phi will be moving into a new house in the spring. The new address will be 1750 N. Vassar, Wichita, KS 67208.

ΘΧ THETA CHI CHAPTER

Villanova

Theta Chi's 2.9 GPA is the third highest GPA on the Villanova campus.

Elsewhere on campus, Tony Rezza was chairman of the Special Olympics program for Villanova. Chapter Treasurer Chris Gheysens was vice president of the Order of Omega and IFC rush chairman. Anthony Palladino started the forensics club on Villanova's campus. Many other brothers were involved in the freshman orientation program, the Big Brother Program, and Special Olympics.

During the two week rush process, the chapter took ten new pledges for the fall semester.

In athletics, Theta Chi was involved in soccer and flag football. Several Pikes were members of Villanova's football, soccer, and baseball teams.

The chapter also took part in the North Atlantic Region Sports Challenge.

ΙΑ IOTA ALPHA CHAPTER

Wyoming

Iota Alpha's pledging of thirty-five men during the fall pushed the chapter's membership to a total of 118 dedicated Pikes.

The chapter had its annual Homecoming Barbecue on October 10. Lunch was served following the homecoming parade.

ΙΑ IOTA DELTA CHAPTER

Rose-Hulman

Several members of Iota Delta were involved in volunteer service this past year. Over 600 hours at camps, over 750 hours of construction abroad, and 50 hours of EMT/fireman work were amassed by the Pikes at Rose-Hulman.

Four members of Iota Delta went to the Dominican Republic through InterVarsity Christian Fellowship to work with World Servants (a mission organization) during spring break. Jeff Fredricks, Scott Gareiss, Jeff Miheve, and Jim Webster all learned to play with children in Spanish while brushing up on their block laying skills. They built a kitchen for project Niños, a health care and education clinic that also emphasizes evangelism.

Todd Devore has spent the last three summers as a volunteer EMT/fireman. He has fought against four fires and has worked aboard several ambulances. Clay Armstrong and Mike Wever both worked as Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) huddle leaders at golf camps this past summer. Scott Gareiss and Kyle Massey also volunteered as counselors for one week a piece. They both worked at Christian camps. Gareiss also worked as a lifeguard during his week as a volunteer.

ΙΖ IOTA ZETA CHAPTER

Randolph Macon

On Saturday, October 26, the brothers of Iota Zeta spent the day with the children cancer patients from the Medical College of Virginia. The brothers and children spent the day celebrating Halloween as they played games, enjoyed hayrides, and made some new friends.

In the fall the chapter also raised money for Randolph Macon Security Guard Walt Hawkins. Hawkins moonlights as a member of K-9 Search and Rescue dog team. The money went towards much needed equipment. The chapter also held its annual blood drive during the fall. The men of Iota Zeta had the highest turnout rate for the Richmond Blood Service.

ΙΗ IOTA ETA CHAPTER

Nevada-Reno

Iota Eta's chartering president Michael Hickey, who signed for the chapter's new house last year, also volunteered to serve as the chapter's housing corporation president. Jeff Millar volunteered to be the chapter's financial advisor. Michael Espino worked to establish the Nevada PiKA Alumni Association.

In community service, the chapter worked on the Adopt-A-Highway program and every Friday the Pikes teamed up with Pi Beta Phi sorority to feed the homeless at St. Vincent's. The chapter accumulated over 300 hours of community service and set a goal of 1,000 man hours. The community service chairman is also working on a book drive for the local prison.

Chartering Treasurer Spencer Robinson was elected regional vice president for next spring's regional leadership conference.

The chapter pledged twenty men as they hosted rush events that included a basketball and football games, as well as a ping pong contest.

In athletics, the chapter was in first place for the Greek Sports trophy. The chapter has come in second place for the trophy the last two years.

ΙΘ IOTA THETA CHAPTER

California Polytechnic-San Luis Obispo

Under the leadership of past presidents Jim Deslaurier and Tony Martindale, Iota Theta maintained its excellence both on and off campus.

Iota Theta held its second annual all-sorority softball tournament. All Panhellenic sororities on campus participated in the event. Proceeds from the tournament were donated to Hospice of San Luis Obispo. In Cal Poly tennis, Iota Theta brothers Mark Nielsen and Steve Arnott achieved All-American status. The chapter was awarded its second consecutive Smythe Award at the 1992 National Convention.

JOHNS HOPKINS COLONY

Johns Hopkins University

The members of the Pi Kappa Alpha Colony at Johns Hopkins University made numerous accomplishments over the past few months as they continued to work towards becoming the thirteenth chapter in the Founders Region.

In athletics, the Pikes were represented in five varsity sports. They were undefeated in intramural football. Community service hours were accumulated through tutorials, street and neighborhood clean-ups, and volunteer work at the Johns Hopkins Hospital and Medical School. A fundraiser for the National Institute for the Blind raised over $20,000 for this worthy organization.

On campus, the Pikes were visible in a wide range of campus activities. Pikes held positions in over twenty-five campus affiliated clubs and organizations, including the chairman of the student council and the president and vice president of the intramural program. The Pikes were also involved in more IFC committees than any other fraternity on campus.

GAMMA PI COLONY

University of Oregon

The Gamma Pi Colony began the school year in impressive fashion. The colony increased its membership by more than thirty percent during fall rush, including the student body president. Joel Brunner was president, Eric Runge and Cooper Hoff were vice presidents, Mike Damiano was secretary and Steve Townsend was treasurer.

From Tulsa to Tinseltown

by Dr. Harry E. Heath (Tulsa, Gamma Upsilon '39)

James Hollan Baker (Tulsa, Gamma Upsilon '39) entered show business in the fifth grade without knowing it was happening.

His parents paid 50 cents an hour twice weekly for his after-school tap dancing lessons at Tulsa's Sidney Lanier Elementary School. Before you could say "Bill Robinson", he was teamed with two talented sisters in an act billed as "Little Jimmie Baker and the Wade Twins". They performed at recitals, civic club meetings and on a local radio amateur show.

Later, his dancing teacher moved his lessons to a downtown studio, one of three studios where the future Pike studied daily before reaching high school.

Baker wanted to be a hooper, but was convinced that he needed to study ballet for balance and grace of movement. To pay for the instruction, he traded tap dancing lessons for a year of ballet. One of his ballet instructors was Birch Holtzmann, a gifted woman who later choreographed the Mouseketeers for Walt Disney.

By the time he had reached Tulsa Central High, a school with about 5,000 students, Baker had perfected his tap dancing, including high hat, tails and cane.

Fred Astaire was his primary model, but he learned much from the dance styles of Hal Leroy and Bill "Bojangles" Robinson. He mastered Robinson's style by sitting in a movie house all day, picking up four or five basic routines that he still uses.

Before he had finished high school, Baker was on a national radio hookup. In the summer following his junior year, he went to New York City for a tryout with Major Edward Bowes, a CBS star whose amateur hour was one of pre-television-radio's biggest draws. Frank Sinatra, singing with the Hoboken Four, and Baker, with a routine he performed on a tiny platform he had designed, were both winners. That summer Sinatra and Baker were on separate road companies for Bowes. The touring amateurs made $25 a week plus expenses.

The summer before he entered the University of Tulsa, where he pledged PiKA in the fall of 1938, Baker took a giant step forward in show business. He returned to New York City with his principal Tulsa dance teacher, Lou Miller. Miller had Broadway connections, and Baker was given a tryout by choreographer Charles Walters, who was casting "I Married An Angel", starring Ilona Massey, a ravishing Hungarian beauty.

It was a time when Broadway musicals were show business biggies. Call sheets were all around, backed up by newspaper ads seeking dancing talent between the ages of 18 and 30. Dancers showed up by the dozens. Ten men and ten women were chosen. Baker, 17 at the time, made the cut: he was a chorus boy. He stayed on to dance in two stage shows, "New Faces" and "On Your Toes".

"That sold me," he recalled, flashing the broad smile that has become his trademark. "I decided I'd be a dancer and do shows on Broadway."

Fifteen-year-old Jimmie Baker with Major Bowes

He learned a lot about dancing that summer from Walters, at that time one of the top Broadway choreographers. He had no way of knowing then that his future would lead him to Hollywood rather than Broadway.

Along the road to Hollywood, four forces combined to change the exuberant, unpredictable youth of his early Oklahoma years to the self-assured, relaxed positive thinker that he is today. In the order of their appearance in his life, those life-changing forces were Pi Kappa Alpha, his marriage to Sue Carlton, a chance introduction to a new philosophy, and a health crisis with a happy outcome.

Pi Kappa Alpha and the College Years

PiKA was homeless when Baker arrived at the University of Tulsa on a band scholarship. Plans had been made for the construction of a new house, and members leaving the old two-story frame structure near the campus were either in Kemp Lodge or scattered among various homes and apartments. Chapter meetings were held in Kendall Hall on campus.

"In spite of that, we were a family," Baker recalled. "It gave me a sense of belonging, a feeling of cohesion — it made college life for me. I loved it."

Following initiation at Tulsa, he spent the next year at the University of Arkansas, followed by two years at Oklahoma A&M College (now Oklahoma State), World War II service, and a post-war reprise at A&M.

In each case, it was his showmanship that led to his change in campus locales. Not only was he one of the most colorful and dramatic drum majors ever to lead a marching band to mid-field on a crisp, fall football Saturday, but he added excitement during the halftime show by tap dancing to the band's syncopated rhythm on a giant drum fitted with thick plywood. The frosting on the cake came during lulls in the game when his jazz ensemble, seated next to the marching band, would swing out with a pop tune of the day. It was a twist that Sousa no doubt would have condemned, but it soon became standard fare in college football and basketball across the nation.

His trend-setting antics at Tulsa were made possible by Albert "Pop" Weatherly, who engineered a band scholarship for him. Baker had been Weatherly's drum major for three years at Tulsa Central.

Julian Faust, band director at the University of Arkansas, saw him perform at the traditional Tulsa-Arkansas Thanksgiving Day game. Faust lured him to Fayetteville with a full-tuition scholarship plus $25 a month and his PiKA house dues.

At Tulsa, Baker had formed the 12-piece "Hurricane Swingsters". The music of Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Glenn Miller and other big bands was sweeping the nation's campuses, and the Swingsters were in the groove.

When he moved to Arkansas, he organized "Jimmie Baker and The Collegians" and continued to add excitement to the campus entertainment scene. Johnny Anderson, who later played trumpet for Stan Kenton, was only one of many talented musicians who started with Baker and moved on to national prominence.

Then it happened again. A. Frank Martin, head of Student Entertainers at Oklahoma A&M, caught Baker's halftime act during the 1939 Razorback-Cowboy clash. Martin had a better package to offer.

Life in the Pi Kappa Alpha house at Fayetteville was good, and Baker needed some time to think things over. After hours of soul-searching, he agreed to move to Stillwater. Five of his dance-band crew moved with him to re-form the Collegians at their new Oklahoma base. Baker soon built an active fraternity life in Gamma Chi Chapter.

The Swingsters had no competition at Tulsa. At Arkansas, Baker's Collegians had entered into spirited competition with the popular Varsity Club band. When he arrived in Stillwater, he found the campus social scene dominated by "The Varsitonians"; a smooth dance band headed by Hal Price. Within two years, the Collegians had become the top choice for major fraternity and sorority dances.

Again, fellowship at the PiKA house was one of the most satisfying rewards of Baker's college life. Many of his high school friends were on the Stillwater campus, and Gamma Chi, only two years old, was loaded with the typical enthusiasm of a new chapter striving for campus leadership. On top of all this was the acclaim for "Jimmie Baker and The Collegians", whose fame reached beyond campus limits through four musical film shorts, a four-state hookup with a program called "Melody Matinee", weekly broadcasts over KTUL-Tulsa and network exposure on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

World War II

As Hitler's conquest of Europe moved methodically forward, the United States began gearing up for the uncertain path ahead. Soon fraternity life would come to a virtual standstill. Dances would be shelved for what everyone referred to as "the duration". In July, 1942, seven months after Japanese bombs fell on Pearl Harbor, Baker was drafted.

Almost overnight, it seemed, America's colleges and universities — unless they had war contracts for special training units — resembled women's colleges. Most able-bodied men were drafted or had enlisted.

At Fort Sill, Oklahoma, Baker asked to be assigned to Special Services, where his experience as an entertainer could be put to use. He was assigned to the 11th Army Air Corps Band at St. Petersburg, Florida, for the next 18 months. During the day he was drum major, "without the high-step strutting of my college days," and at night, he fronted "Corporal Jimmie Baker and the Men of the Air", playing Friday nights at the Officers' Club and Saturday nights for the enlisted men billeted in downtown hotels one block away. Baker's dance band, backing the acts, was the nucleus for every traveling USO show that came to the St. Petersburg area.

Then came a move to Mississippi, where the 11th was assigned to Gulfport Air Base. The shift from billets in a resort hotel to barracks and standard Army beds brought Baker and his fellow musicians a step closer to reality, but their duties were essentially unchanged. There were the USO shows once or twice a month and the weekly dances for the Officers' and NCO Clubs on an outdoor pavilion that made the clamor of war seem far away.

Following a year in Gulfport and six months at Chanute Field, Illinois, where singer-actor Tony Martin was stationed, Baker and his dance band were transferred to Special Services and assigned to Dow Field in Bangor, Maine, a lift-off point for B-25s bound for England. By now, he was a staff sergeant, but he lost his stripes when he played for an unauthorized dance in a nearby town. He was Private Baker once more, climbing his way back up the promotion ladder.

After a little over a year at Dow Field, Baker's unit was scheduled for overseas assignment. Following processing at Fort Meade, Maryland, he was shipped to Fort Dix, New Jersey.

At Dix, Private First Class Jack Leonard, Tommy Dorsey's star vocalist before the war, fronted a military swing band typical of those at all military bases. Each, including Baker's, played a vital role in building morale among servicemen preparing for combat.

Baker and eight of his dance band boarded a Liberty Ship bound for Le Havre, France. At this debarkation port, conditions were so crowded that Baker ate his first meal in Europe standing up in a mammoth barn-like building with a roof but no walls. Massive reinforcements were arriving daily as the war entered its final phase. The value of entertainment for troops soon would be more vital than ever. Eight new men joined Baker to bring his band to 16 members once more.

The crucial Battle of the Bulge, Germany's last-gasp hope for victory, was still on as Mickey Rooney, singer Bobby Breen, Baker and others took three-man "Jeep Shows" to the troops. As the fighting wound down, Rooney organized "O.K., U.S.A." and Baker formed "Yankee Jubilee" for the 187th Special Services Battalion, a unit whose primary mission was to produce shows for combat and combat-support troops.

Then came "Could Be" in Paris, where Baker again put his magic feet and perfect sense of rhythm to work in the service of G.I. Joe. The show's military leader was First Lieutenant Al Gannaway, a song writer whose band had been Baker's competitor at the University of Arkansas. Baker's orders to join Gannaway as a dancer meant he must leave his own band. It continued as part of the "Yankee Jubilee" company.

"Could Be" was big, like its more famous cousin, "This Is the Army". Baker brushed up on his dancing skills and tapped his way across improvised stages in France to the enthusiastic approval of G.I. audiences.

The "Crusade in Europe", a noble name for a necessary but bloody and costly war, ended on May 8, 1945. Approximately four months later, on September 2, the imperial forces of Japan formally surrendered on the Battleship Missouri. Baker and millions of other G.I.s were heading stateside.

The Road to Hollywood

After a joyous reunion with his parents, who had moved to Oklahoma City, he was back on the A&M campus in time for the 1946-47 academic year, one that saw him complete his degree in the School of Education. That year, Baker put the know-how he had learned in Special Services to good use. He scored one theatrical success after another. The Collegians were chosen by Downbeat Magazine as the number-one college band of the year, Baker produced the traditional Varsity Revue show with the most scintillating chorus line and choreography the campus had ever seen — and then took the show on the road.

Following graduation, the Collegians stayed together. They were billed as "Jimmie Baker and His Orchestra, The Band That Plays Sweet Swing". They accepted a gig on the stage of one of Oklahoma City's leading theaters, then toured the Southeast before signing for a one-year engagement at the Skirvin Tower. Oklahoma City's leading radio station, WKY, did a remote broadcast every Saturday night from the Silver Glade Room, and the band's popularity spread. By day, Baker was a social science teacher at Franklin Junior High School. By night, he was Maestro Jimmie Baker. It was during this time that he met his future wife, Sue Carlton.

Corporal Jimmie Baker and the Men of the Air

Late in 1948, Baker and his orchestra headed west. After a three-month engagement in Las Vegas, the group broke up. Shortly after, Jimmie and Sue were married on July 20, 1948, and decided to take their chances in Hollywood, where they reside today.

Contrary to the notion that Tinseltown means multiple divorces and a merry-go-round of new marriages for everyone who makes a career there, Jimmie Baker and Sue Carlton don't fit that image. Their 44-year marriage is still solid and happy. Sue and their son, Jamie, are the core of Baker's closely-knit family life, and motivate his achievements in television and film. Both have busy careers. Sue has been a successful actress and model throughout their marriage, while Jimmie has gathered five Emmy Awards, two Ace Awards and six Angel Awards for a wide range of successful productions featuring some of the nation's icons of motion pictures and television.

The list of stars Baker has worked with as a director and producer reads like a Hollywood Who's Who. In music, his credits include Johnny Mercer, Paul White-man, Jack Teagarden, Ella Fitzgerald, Lena Horne, Sammy Davis, Jr., Lionel Hampton and Les Brown, among others. In motion pictures, it's an honor roll of stars headed by the likes of Jimmy Stewart, Burt Lancaster, Paul Newman, Jack Lemmon, Bob Hope, Marilyn Monroe, Bing Crosby, Charlton Heston, Frank Sinatra, Edward G. Robinson, Milton Berle, George Burns... and the roll call continues beyond this story's space allotment.

Philosophy and health also play important parts in Baker's life. He was attracted to an unfamiliar church one Sunday while on a stroll. Investigation led to an unwavering program of daily meditation in the early morning hours that reaches throughout the day, bringing a sense of confident, positive action to every situation. Today, he is on the board of directors of the Hollywood Church of Religious Science.

Another major life change came the hard way in 1975. His doctors discovered clogged arteries and recommended triple bypass surgery. Instead, he changed his diet and exercise habits. Seventeen years later, his stress-free vigor continues to amaze his co-workers at ABC-TV, as well as his friends, especially those who meet him at reunions after a decade or two have passed.

James Hollan Baker (Gamma Upsilon '39)

Baker doesn't fit the generally accepted stereotype of "senior citizen". He runs six to eight miles six days a week, plays a mean game of tennis and follows a diet of whole grains, vegetables, fresh fruit, fish, fowl and skim milk, and avoids salt and sugar.

The one-time Aggie has not allowed his show-business career to mute his social conscience. As executive vice-president and a board member of The Thelians, a Hollywood show business society, he has produced star-studded extravaganzas that have reaped millions of dollars for charitable purposes. One cause that has given him special pride is the Thelian Clinic for emotionally disturbed children at Mt. Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles.

It's a long road from red-dirt country to Hollywood success, but James Hollan Baker has made the trip — and he's never forgotten the people and the places where it all began. Pi Kappa Alpha is high on that list.

Baker has contributed much in service to the ideals of phi phi kappa alpha. As a student, his fraternity bonds stretched across three campuses. He shows his loyalty today by gifts and services to all three chapters, recalling that "Once a Pike, Always a Pike". Of special note is his annual production of Oklahoma State University's Hall of Fame telecast. Two of his Angel awards were for OSU centennial shows, the 1991 Opening Ceremonies, and the OSU Showcase.

Baker is still a hooper at heart, and loves to perform. A year ago when he was inducted into the Tulsa Central High School Hall of Fame, he expressed his thanks in a special way. He called pianist-arranger Ed Gowans (Tulsa, Gamma Upsilon '39) to the stage. Brother Gowans played while Baker danced an intricate routine that even his good friend, Gene Kelly, would have praised. And as they always have for so many years, the audience whooped it up.

To be more than we are. . .

Rev. Simon A. Simon
(Delta Chi '54)

Ernest Hemingway, in The Old Man and the Sea, tells of an aging fisherman who went out in his boat off the coast of Havana. It was his 85th day since he had taken a fish.

He was alone because the little boy who had once helped him had been forced by his parents to fish with a luckier fisherman.

The old man rowed far out to sea, and the great fish for whom he had always longed took one of his lines. It was a huge fish, two feet longer than the boat; the struggle was fierce and relentless. To keep the line from snapping, the old man held it with his bare hand to cushion the strain of sudden lunges. All afternoon the big fish fought the old man. During the night, through the chill of the dark hours, his cold, now torn left hand cramped. It was disheartening to feel the pain, to see how his cramped, ripped hand had failed him, and to make little progress with the fish. I quote now from an article about the book written to illustrate a valuable point:

In the morning, the great fish surfaced, bulging and breaking the ocean's crest, and shedding the water in wide silver sheets. . . . How the old man admired it! He respected it, held it in awe, thought of its beauty and grace, and felt like a brother to it. But the fish was an antagonist also. He longed for a companion in the boat, and for a useful left hand. He wondered about the fish's strength. Then he mused: "I wish I could show him what sort of man I am. But then he would see the cramped hand. Let him think I am more of a man than I am, and I will be so."

"Let him think I am more of a man than I am, and I will be so." For the old man, another's image of him would help him see himself as more than he was. To be more than we are. This is a great thought for us as we enter the seasons of special celebration for two great religious traditions within our brotherhood. Our Jewish brothers will celebrate the eight-day festival of Hannukah, and our Christian brothers will celebrate the seasons of Advent and Christmas. Both celebrations carry great significance for all of us.

Hebrew tradition tells of the rebuilding of the Temple and its cleaning. Only enough oil was found to burn the altar lamp for one day, but it miraculously burned for eight days. Hanukkah, or the festival of lights, celebrates the miracle of the light provided during the cleaning of the temple.

The Jewish and Christian celebrations in December are powerful reminders to us of a God who is committed to help us "become more than we are". In the eyes of God, each of us is the highest of all creation. As the old man in the story hoped to become more than he was through another's image, so may we be reminded it is God's hope that we, His children, may become more than we are.

What a great reinforcement our Fraternity is to this process. Within the realm of this world, Pi Kappa Alpha stands tall as a constant force to help its brothers become "more than we are".

The philosopher Goethe wisely reminds us, "Treat people as if they were what they ought to be, and you help them to become what they are capable of being."

For our Fraternity and our brothers, the great challenge of this season of celebrations is to recommit ourselves to the task of helping each other become what we are capable of being. All of us were pledged because someone believed we were capable of becoming more than we were. The real challenge comes after the pledging, when we must forever encourage our brothers to a higher plane of living. May God bless us as we endeavor to become more than we are — ourselves and our brothers.

Community Service

An Ongoing Tradition

In the June 1992 issue of Shield & Diamond, Past National President Jerry Askew said that he believed the biggest issue that Pi Kappa Alpha would face in the next few years would be relevance. Askew went on to say that community service "has to become one of our reasons for being, rather than something we do so that we can fill out a year-end summary."

Last year, the undergraduate chapters of Pi Kappa Alpha raised over $170,000 for charity while performing over 100,000 hours of community service. These impressive accomplishments indicated that Pikes were not doing community service for the sake of the year-end summary, but because they recognized their responsibility to be a vital part of their communities. Like Past National President Askew, the undergraduate chapters recognized the issue of relevance as well.

This past fall saw Pikes at chapters across the country strengthen their place as prominent members of their local communities.

Alpha Omega Chapter at Kansas State University received an Honorable Mention Community Service Award at the National Convention. Once back from Phoenix, Alpha Omega didn't waste any time beginning 1992-93 community service activities. In August, the Pikes sponsored Beach Bash at a local lake. The two-day event was held to benefit the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. The chapter raised money by charging other Greek groups entry fees to participate in events such as a volleyball match, an obstacle course and a canoe race. By the end of the event, the chapter had raised $2,000 for Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

In October, Alpha Omega sponsored the Pi Kappa Alpha Halloween Hunt to provide children in the community with a safe Halloween courtesy of the Pikes and the KSU Greek system. The Pikes, along with several sororities, opened their chapter houses for area children to come trick or treat. They also set up a haunted house in their basement to add to the Halloween festivities. The "Hunt" resulted in 900 hours of community service for the chapter and was a great source of positive publicity for Alpha Omega. The event was advertised on local cable television and on the radio through the support of the local police.

Delta Iota Chapter at Marshall University returned from the 1992 National Convention with its sixth consecutive Community Service Award. Last year the chapter accumulated 4,861 man hours and raised over $40,000 for various causes. According to Community Service Chairman Sean Singleton, this year's community service efforts are ahead of last year's pace.

One of Delta Iota's major events was a rummage sale for the Junior League of Huntington, West Virginia. Members of the chapter went all over the community collecting items, and were responsible for accumulating over $15,000 and over 980 man-hours of community service.

Singleton said his goal was to set up activities throughout the semester. The chapter held two substantial activities each month and was also active in weekly events. Every Tuesday evening the Pikes and Phi Mu sorority babysat children for the Cabell County Child Protection Team. Delta Iota also did maintenance for the Barboursville Veteran's Home as well as Timeout Youth Services.

Community service was part of the daily routine during the fall for members of Delta Chi Chapter at the University of Nebraska-Omaha. From August 1 to November 14, four Pikes coached a little league football team for three hours a night, five days a week. The team then played games on the weekends. Through the coaching and support of the team, members of Delta Chi accumulated over 1,000 hours of community service.

Three members of Delta Chi participated in the Nebraska Muscular Dystrophy Bike-A-Thon. Two of the Pikes finished in first and second places. For Brian Nastase, one of the top two finishers, contributing to MDA was especially rewarding because his father suffers from Muscular Dystrophy.

Delta Chi also sold honey door-to-door for the Greater Omaha Association for Retired Citizens (GOARC).

Pikes devoted their time to the Nebraska Highway Patrol's Night of Lights on the UNO campus. They helped set up the event which was held to raise awareness of the number of people involved in fatal automobile accidents due to alcohol.

Community Service Chairman Doug Cranfield said that community service was not mandatory at Delta Chi. The chapter tried to motivate members by offering a number of different community service activities. Cranfield also said that community service was not an individual effort for Delta Chi, but rather something that "our fraternity does together."

Zeta Tau Chapter cleaned up at Eastern Kentucky University.

The Pikes of Epsilon Mu Chapter at East Carolina University accumulated over 4,000 man hours in 1991-92 and raised almost $21,000 through community service. This year, Epsilon Mu decided to challenge the other chapters of the Carolinas Region to a community service competition. During the month of November, the chapters of the region competed against one another in a canned food drive. All proceeds from the competition were donated to the Harvest Hope Food Bank.

The local Ronald McDonald House was the recipient of Epsilon Mu's commitment to community service on many occasions. According to Community Service Chairman Allen Drake, chapter members helped clean the Ronald McDonald House every other week and assisted with fundraising. Each year the Pikes sponsor their annual "Walk to Wilmington." Last year they dribbled a basketball 117 miles from Greenville to Wilmington the weekend of the East Carolina-Wilmington basketball game, and donated $4,000 to the Ronald McDonald House as a result of the event.

An Honorable Mention Community Service Award was given to Zeta Tau Chapter at Eastern Kentucky University. In 1991-92 the chapter completed 2,127 hours of community service and raised over $9,200, and averaged 76 hours of community service per chapter member.

The Big Brothers of America benefited from the efforts of Zeta Tau. According to Community Service Chairman Chris Kiger, anytime the chapter raised money, the proceeds went to Big Brothers of America. Zeta Tau hosted a Dream Girl Pageant which raised over $4,300 for the Big Brothers program.

Aside from working with Big Brothers, Zeta Tau was involved in a variety of community service events. The chapter worked with the Fraternal Order of Police, donated manpower to Adopt-A-Highway, and organized bingo for the senior citizens of Madison Manor. The men of Zeta Tau were also actively involved with Special Olympics. Kiger said the chapter went bowling and skating with Special Olympians and were "huggers" at Special Olympic events.

On the campus of Northeastern Louisiana University, Eta Omicron Chapter has won the IFC Community Service Program of the Year for three years in a row. Last year the chapter accumulated over 3,000 hours of community service with an average of 53 hours per man. Eta Omicron is making a strong bid for its fourth community service award by achieving numbers surpassing last year's totals at this time.

In September, Eta Omicron organized Pike Jam to benefit AIDS research. The Pikes held a concert featuring seven bands which raised $755.00 through admission to the concert. The money was donated to GOCARE, an organization that educates and lectures on AIDS awareness.

On campus, Eta Omicron was the highest participator in the campus blood drive. Not only did members donate blood, but they also put up posters in dorms and on campus promoting the drive.

Eta Omicron also spent time working with the Louisiana Technical Institute, a juvenile prison. Members of Eta Omicron visited the institute and played sports with the boys, then spent time talking with them afterwards.

Kyle Keeler and William Maurice are co-chairman of Eta Omicron's community service program. Maurice said the chapter has been able to improve its program by working hard to establish annual projects that are literally "waiting for the chapter." The constant presence of the chapter in these efforts has solidified Eta Omicron's place in the community. "People call Pi Kappa Alpha if they need anything done," Maurice said.

Successful transition has allowed Eta Phi Chapter at the University of Central Florida to develop a tremendous community service program. Community Service Chairman Rob Branch said that each community service chairman documents the details of his job in a notebook. The notebook describes events and gives recommendations on the "do's and don'ts" of the chapter's community service efforts. This notebook serves as a guide for the chapter's next community service chairman.

Eta Phi was involved in a number of activities during the fall semester. On Halloween, the Pikes collaborated with Ovido Parks & Recreation to put on a Halloween party for 400 children.

The chapter also raised money for the Coalition for the Homeless. The members had a welcome back to school party and took donations at the door, and made promotional ads to encourage campus support. As a result of Eta Phi's work, $1,300 was raised for the Coalition.

The Central Florida Sheltered Workshop was the recipient of Pike man-hours, where members did painting and general maintenance. The Workshop is an organization that secured jobs at Orlando companies for mentally retarded individuals.

Another chapter that received an Honorable Mention Community Service Award was Iota Pi Chapter at the University of California-Los Angeles. In 1991-92, Iota Pi sponsored 16 community service events and was involved in a total of 38 projects.

One of Iota Pi's sponsored events was the third annual Pi Kappa Alpha Holiday Party for children. Inner-city children were invited to spend the day with the Pikes and the women of Delta Delta Delta sorority playing games and eating pizza.

The UCLA Pikes also sponsored a food and toy drive. Canned goods were collected in West Los Angeles and given to the homeless.

The chapter also participated in a beach cleanup for the city of Santa Monica, and worked with the Adopt-A-Highway program three times a year. According to Community Service Chairman Frances Alcantara, Iota Pi's outstanding reputation in community service was what attracted him to Pi Kappa Alpha. He heard that Pi Kappa Alpha was "doing good things" and that convinced him to join the Fraternity.

These eight chapters were just a few of the Pi Kappa Alpha chapters that played leading roles in community service on their campuses this past fall. Many of the chapters profiled in the Chapter Notes department of the Shield & Diamond also made significant contributions to their communities. Through the civic and philanthropic efforts of these chapters, it is apparent that the men of Pi Kappa Alpha can readily justify their "relevance" on college campuses across the country. □

Brad Carter and Tom Morris carried the ball for Epsilon Mu Chapter's "Walk to Wilmington".
